THE SMART TEAM MANAGER

ACHIEVE MORE & BE A GREAT TEAM

You work with other people every day. Your interpersonal and team management skills determine what the performance of the team will be, how the progress of achieving targets will go, how much fun you have and how much you will learn. How other people feel when part of the same team with you also has a significant impact on the quality of your future relationships. In summary, your team management skills are a key factor for individual and organizational success.

This course is designed for managers who dare to become aware and develop their interpersonal and team management skills and to discover ways to challenge themselves and others while seeking to further develop their career.
